Excellence deserves to be seen

Recognising talent
Creating opportunity
Advancing women in law

Excellence takes many forms.

It can look like the determination to build something from the ground up, or the courage to challenge convention. It can be the expertise developed over years of practice, as well as the leadership inspiring others and the ambition to shape the future of the legal profession.

Across Australia, we know extraordinary women are leading firms, building practices, mentoring future leaders and redefining what's possible.

And when exceptional talent is recognised, opportunity follows.

At Insource, we believe the future of law is shaped by the people who have the expertise, ambition and potential to lead it.

The future of law will be shaped by extraordinary people.

Founded by legal technology entrepreneur Jenn Little, Insource helps law firms see beyond traditional networks, discover legal talent and make more informed decisions about the people who will shape their future.

Our technology provides greater visibility of the legal talent market and is designed to reduce opportunities for unconscious bias, placing professional capability and experience at the centre of the conversation.

When your firm can see talent more clearly, you can make better decisions about who joins your team and who could help lead them into the future.

As a proud event partner of the Women in Law Forum and Women in Law Awards 2026, we're celebrating the remarkable women demonstrating excellence across the profession.

The future of law will be shaped by extraordinary people.

Let's make sure their excellence is seen.

When we see talent differently, we open the door to new possibilities.

Meet Jenn Little

Founder and Managing Director, Insource

Jenn Little knows what it takes to challenge convention.

As a female founder building a technology business in the legal industry, Jenn understands the importance of determination, opportunity and having the confidence to do things differently.

She founded Insource with a vision to give law firms a clearer picture of the legal talent market, helping them look beyond established networks and make better-informed decisions about their people.

Today, Jenn continues to champion innovation, meaningful connections and the role technology can play in helping the legal profession evolve.

Her belief is simple: when we create greater visibility of talent, we create more opportunities for excellence to be recognised.

A clearer view of your legal talent market

What could your firm discover with greater visibility?

Insource is a legal recruitment technology platform designed to help law firms identify and connect with legal talent, understand their market and approach recruitment with greater insight.

With Insource, your firm can:

- Discover legal talent beyond existing networks and traditional recruitment channels
- Gain greater visibility of the legal talent market
- Focus on professional experience and capability through profiles designed to reduce opportunities for unconscious bias
- Make more informed, strategic recruitment decisions
- Build stronger talent pipelines for the future.

What talent could your firm be missing?

The next exceptional lawyer, future partner or influential leader could already be in your market.

The question is, can you see them?

Discover how Insource can help your firm see the legal talent market differently.
